

CONSTITUTION OF THE DESTENIAN REPUBLIC

PREAMBLE

Destenia emerged from the condition of a people within, forgotten or excluded, denied full participation, and dignity. From this reality arose the Nation of the Forgotten, whose national will, expressed through collective discipline and sacrifice, and under the guiding principles of Destenism, led to the establishment of a renewed political order founded on unity and self-determination. This Constitution establishes a sovereign, indivisible, and democratic Republic, based on responsibility, merit, social justice, and national cohesion. It affirms that rights and freedoms are inseparable from civic duties, that liberty is exercised within the framework of law, and that the unity of the Republic constitutes the essential condition for stability, security, and equality. In adopting this Constitution, the people of Destenia affirm their self-determination, reject all forms of domination and foreign subordination, and commit themselves to the preservation of national sovereignty, institutional continuity, and constitutional governance. This Constitution stands as the supreme legal foundation of the Republic, binding present and future generations to the collective destiny of the Destenian Nation.

SECTION 1 – BASIC PRINCIPLES

ARTICLE 1

Destenia is hereby constituted as a sovereign and indivisible Republic, founded on the principles of the Nation of the Forgotten, the democratic will of its people, and the supremacy of this Constitution, which represents the highest expression of the national will.

ARTICLE 2

The Republic shall not resort to war as a means of resolving international disputes, except when its sovereignty, national interest, or territorial integrity is under existential threat.

ARTICLE 3

Sovereignty resides in the people and is exercised through universal suffrage and the constitutional institutions of the Republic. No organization, party, movement, or authority may undermine the sovereignty, unity, security, or foundational values of the Republic. Any act contrary to this Constitution shall be null and without legal effect.

ARTICLE 4

The capital city of the Republic is Distinia. It is the seat of the constitutional institutions and the symbol of national unity.

ARTICLE 5

The flag of the Republic is a horizontal tricolor of white, blue, and orange. The coat of arms of the Republic is the Shield of the Revolution framed by golden olive branches with the inscription “Destenian Republic” beneath. The national symbols are protected by law and represent the unity, history, and sovereignty of the Nation.

ARTICLE 6

The national anthem of the Republic is “Glory to Destenia”. The motto of the Republic is “From many we came, one mighty Nation”. These symbols embody the identity, values, and collective destiny of the Destenian people and shall be respected by all institutions and citizens.

SECTION 2 – RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF CITIZENS

ARTICLE 7

Citizenship shall be acquired by birth, descent, naturalization, or other lawful means as established by law. The law shall regulate the procedures and conditions under which citizenship may be suspended, forfeited, or voluntarily renounced.

ARTICLE 8

No citizen shall be subjected to discrimination based on gender, sex, ethnicity, social origin, class, or political opinion. Equality before the law is guaranteed and shall be upheld by all institutions of the Republic.

ARTICLE 9

Every citizen shall have the right to life, the right to work, the right to vote in elections, and the right to education. These rights shall be protected and guaranteed by the Republic without exception.

ARTICLE 10

Every citizen shall enjoy the freedoms of speech, the press, religion, thought, movement, assembly, and association. These freedoms shall be inviolable and protected by the Republic. No citizen shall be subject to censorship, persecution, or punishment for exercising these freedoms, unless such exercise violates the law or endangers public order, security, or the rights of others.

ARTICLE 11

This Constitution shall be interpreted in a manner that guarantees and enhances the rights and freedoms of all citizens. Any limitations imposed on these rights and freedoms must be prescribed by law and justified in accordance with the principles of necessity, proportionality, and the general interest of the Republic.

ARTICLE 12

All citizens have the duty to be loyal to the Republic, to uphold its Constitution, and to promote its values. Obedience to the laws of the Republic is a fundamental civic obligation.

ARTICLE 13

All citizens have the duty to contribute to the financing of public expenditures through the payment of taxes in accordance with their income and the provisions established by law.

ARTICLE 14

All able-bodied citizens have the duty to serve in the defense of the Republic, as established by law. This may include mandatory conscription, voluntary service, or alternative civil service. The right to conscientious objection may be recognized under conditions defined by law.

ARTICLE 15

No citizen shall be deprived of liberty or punished without due process of law. The right to a fair and public trial, conducted by an impartial tribunal, is guaranteed to every citizen.

ARTICLE 16

If a citizen is lawfully convicted after a fair trial, the execution of punishment shall be carried out in accordance with the law, with full respect for the dignity and rights of the individual.

ARTICLE 17

The death penalty is prohibited in the Republic. This prohibition applies in all circumstances and without exception, regardless of the nature or gravity of the offense committed.

ARTICLE 18

Every citizen is free to profess, practice, or reject any religion or belief, and to express such belief publicly or privately, individually, or collectively. This freedom shall be protected by the Constitution and shall not be restricted except as provided by law for the protection of public order, health, morals, or the rights and freedoms of others.

ARTICLE 19

Every citizen has the right to manifest their religious beliefs through worship, practice, teaching, and observance. Public expression of religion shall be permitted, provided it does not contravene public order or infringe upon the rights of others, as regulated by law.

ARTICLE 20

Every citizen has the right to privacy. This includes the privacy of personal communications, residence, property, and personal data. Interference with privacy shall only occur in accordance with the law and under judicial oversight.

ARTICLE 21

Every citizen has the right to health. The Republic shall ensure access to essential healthcare services and promote public health for all.

ARTICLE 22

Every citizen has the right to property. Property may be owned, used, inherited, and disposed of, subject to the conditions established by law. Expropriation shall only occur for reasons of public interest and with fair compensation as defined by law.

ARTICLE 23

Citizens unable to afford legal representation shall have the right to free legal aid, as established by law. This right shall be guaranteed in all criminal proceedings and, where necessary, in civil and administrative matters.

ARTICLE 24

Every citizen has the right to participate in the political, economic, social, and cultural life of the Republic. This includes the right to seek, hold, and access public office, in accordance with the principles of merit, transparency, and equality.

ARTICLE 25

Every citizen has the right to preserve, express, and develop their cultural, linguistic, and traditional identity, provided that such expression does not contradict the unity, values, and laws of the Republic.

ARTICLE 26

No citizen shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment. This protection shall apply in all circumstances, including detention and interrogation.

ARTICLE 27

Every citizen has the right to live in a healthy and sustainable environment. The Republic shall take all appropriate measures to protect natural resources, prevent environmental harm, and promote ecological responsibility.

ARTICLE 28

All citizens have the duty to defend the sovereignty, independence, unity, and territorial integrity of the Republic against all threats, both internal and external.

ARTICLE 29

All citizens shall refrain from any actions that promote hatred, division, or violence. Citizens shall act in ways that preserve national unity and social harmony.

ARTICLE 30

All citizens are encouraged to contribute to the scientific, economic, educational, and cultural advancement of the Republic through innovation, productivity, and service to the community.

ARTICLE 31

All citizens have the duty to protect the environment, to avoid pollution, and to support the Republic's efforts for ecological preservation and sustainable development.

ARTICLE 32

All citizens have the duty to promote justice and report any crimes, threats, or acts that endanger public order or national security, in accordance with the law.

SECTION 3 – REGIONS, PROVINCES, AND MUNICIPALITIES

ARTICLE 33

The Republic is composed of the Regions of Seritinia, Marporto, Desupia, Valostia, Litorato, Cassitinia, and Ostinia.

ARTICLE 34

The Republic remains a unitary state with all sovereign authority vested in the central government. Regions possess no independent sovereignty and may not contravene the Constitution or national law.

ARTICLE 35

Each Region is governed by a Regional Cabinet, led by a Governor elected by the Regional Assembly. The Governor serves as the executive leader of the Region and is responsible for implementing national and regional policy, managing public resources, and ensuring coordination with central authorities.

ARTICLE 36

The Regional Assembly is a unicameral body elected every five years by the citizens resident within the Region. It exercises legislative and administrative authority within the limits established by the Constitution and national law.

ARTICLE 37

Each Region shall adopt a Regional Charter, which shall define its internal constitutional organization, institutions, and administrative structure. The Regional Charter shall be subordinate to the Constitution of the Republic and to national legislation.

ARTICLE 38

The Senate of the Republic, as the chamber of territorial representation, maintains oversight over regional affairs. The central government retains the authority to intervene in regional administration when necessary to safeguard constitutional order, national unity, or public security.

ARTICLE 39

A new Region may be created only with the consent of the Senate of the Republic and the approval of the population concerned through a referendum. No Region may secede from the Republic under any circumstance.

ARTICLE 40

Each Region is composed of Provinces. Provinces are intermediate administrative units established to implement national and regional laws and do not possess constitutional or legislative autonomy.

ARTICLE 41

A Province is governed by a Provincial Cabinet, led by a Consul elected by the Provincial Assembly every five years. The Provincial Cabinet is responsible for coordinating public services and implementing policies issued at the regional and national levels.

ARTICLE 42

The Provincial Assembly is composed of the Mayors of all Municipalities within the Province. It serves as the administrative and consultative body of the Province and coordinates inter-municipal policies and development planning.

ARTICLE 43

The Municipality is the smallest administrative division of the Republic. Its territorial jurisdiction may be modified only by law and with the approval of the local population through a referendum.

ARTICLE 44

Municipalities are governed through two organs: the Municipal Assembly, which exercises legislative authority, and the Municipal Cabinet, which exercises executive authority. Both remain fully subject to regional and national law.

ARTICLE 45

The Mayor is elected by the Municipal Assembly following Municipal Elections held every five years. The Mayor serves as the head of the Municipal Cabinet and directs the administration of the Municipality.

ARTICLE 46

The Municipal Assembly is composed of representatives directly elected by the citizens of the Municipality every five years. It enacts local ordinances, approves budgets, and exercises oversight over the Mayor and the Municipal Cabinet.

ARTICLE 47

Municipal governance shall be based on the principles of subsidiarity, proximity to citizens, and responsiveness to local needs. All municipal functions shall be exercised in full compliance with the Constitution and the laws of the Republic.

SECTION 4 – PRESIDENCY

ARTICLE 48

The President of the Republic is the Head of State and the highest constitutional authority of the Republic. The President is elected by direct universal suffrage for a term of seven years. Presidential term limits shall not apply.

ARTICLE 49

The President is elected by absolute majority of the popular vote. To be eligible for election, a citizen must be born in the Republic, possess full civil and political rights, and meet the conditions established by law.

ARTICLE 50

The President exercises supreme authority in matters of foreign policy, national defense, and constitutional oversight. As Supreme Commander of the Armed Forces, the President defines national military strategy and appoints the Chief of High Command and senior military officials. The President may, when necessary, delegate the operational exercise of the powers of Supreme Commander in accordance with the law.

ARTICLE 51

The President appoints the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister directs the government in accordance with the Constitution and remains politically accountable to Parliament. Presidential acts require the countersignature of the Prime Minister, except where expressly exempted by the Constitution.

ARTICLE 52

The President promulgates laws passed by Parliament or may return them once for reconsideration. The President may refer legislation to the Supreme Court for prior constitutional review and may submit specific laws or treaties to a national referendum following consultation with the Prime Minister.

ARTICLE 53

The President may dissolve Parliament and call early elections under conditions defined by law. Such action shall follow consultation with the Prime Minister and must be justified by institutional deadlock or national necessity.

ARTICLE 54

The President appoints and dismisses ministers, ambassadors, senior military officers, judges of the Supreme Court, and senior members of the Council of Ministers, in consultation with the Prime Minister and in accordance with the law.

ARTICLE 55

The President represents the Republic in international relations, conducts diplomacy, ratifies treaties, and receives foreign ambassadors. The President is the principal architect of foreign policy and ensures its alignment with the national interest.

ARTICLE 56

The President may grant individual pardons, commuting or reducing criminal sentences. Amnesty may be granted only through legislation enacted by Parliament.

ARTICLE 57

The office of the President embodies the sovereignty of the Republic, guarantees constitutional continuity, and safeguards national unity, security, and institutional stability. The President acts as the constitutional arbiter of the Republic.

ARTICLE 58

In the event of the President's resignation, death, incapacitation, or removal from office, the Speaker of the Senate shall immediately assume the functions of Acting President of the Republic.

ARTICLE 59

The Acting President shall exercise all constitutional powers of the President until a new President is elected and inaugurated in accordance with the Constitution.

ARTICLE 60

The procedures and timelines for presidential succession and elections shall be regulated by constitutional law.

SECTION 5 – EXECUTIVE

ARTICLE 61

The Council of Ministers constitutes the executive branch of the government of the Republic, in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution. It is responsible for the administration of national affairs and the implementation of state policy across all sectors of governance.

ARTICLE 62

The Council of Ministers is composed of the Prime Minister of the Council of Ministers and ministers in charge of specific governmental departments. The Prime Minister is appointed by the President. Ministers are appointed by the President on the recommendation of the Prime Minister.

ARTICLE 63

The President of the Council of Minister, hereby the Prime Minister, serves as the Head of Government and holds the second-highest executive office in the Republic. The Prime Minister directs domestic governance, oversees the coordination of ministries, and ensures the execution of national policies, operating within the strategic directives established by the President.

ARTICLE 64

The mandate of the Prime Minister is dependent on the confidence of Parliament. Parliament may withdraw its confidence through a vote of no confidence initiated in accordance with parliamentary procedure and approved by an absolute majority of its members. Upon withdrawal of confidence, the government shall resign.

ARTICLE 65

Following the resignation of the government or the dissolution of Parliament, the outgoing Council of Ministers shall remain in office in a caretaker capacity. During this period, it shall limit its actions to ordinary administration and may not adopt measures of a structural, irreversible, or strategic nature, except in cases of necessity.

ARTICLE 66

The Prime Minister presides over the Council of Ministers, establishes government priorities, chairs cabinet meetings, and supervises the work of all ministers. The Prime Minister may issue binding coordination directives to ensure coherence, unity of action, and effective implementation of executive policy.

ARTICLE 67

The Prime Minister directs legislative coordination and oversees the preparation and presentation of government bills to Parliament, ensuring alignment between executive policy and legislative action.

ARTICLE 68

The Prime Minister oversees executive and interministerial committees responsible for policy development, technical evaluation, and coordination. These bodies ensure strategic coherence and effective implementation of national policies in economic, security, and social domains.

ARTICLE 69

In the event of resignation, incapacitation, or death of the Prime Minister, the Deputy Prime Minister shall temporarily assume all powers and responsibilities of the office until a new Prime Minister is appointed by the President in accordance with the Constitution.

ARTICLE 70

Each minister within the Council of Ministers is responsible for a designated governmental sector. Ministers execute national policy, manage public resources, and ensure that their respective sectors operate in conformity with the strategic priorities of the executive authority.

ARTICLE 71

Ministers are politically responsible to Parliament and legally responsible for acts performed in the exercise of their functions, in accordance with the law.

ARTICLE 72

All decrees, regulations, and executive acts issued by a ministry shall require the signatures of both the competent minister and the President. This dual-signature requirement ensures legality, accountability, and executive unity.

ARTICLE 73

The Council of Ministers may propose the creation, dissolution, or reorganization of ministries, as well as the redefinition of ministerial competencies, subject to approval by the President and in accordance with this Constitution.

ARTICLE 74

The executive branch includes agencies and specialized bodies operating under the authority of ministries. These entities may function with operational autonomy as defined by law and are established to manage sector-specific responsibilities.

ARTICLE 75

Executive agencies may adopt internal regulations, administer dedicated budgets, and implement national programs within their jurisdiction. Agency leadership shall be appointed in accordance with the law and professional merit.

ARTICLE 76

All executive agencies remain under the political authority and supervision of the competent minister, who ensures alignment with national law, executive policy, and the strategic direction set by the President and the Prime Minister.

ARTICLE 77

During a state of emergency or other constitutionally recognized crisis, the Council of Ministers shall act collectively to ensure continuity of governance, national security, and public order. Measures adopted during such periods shall be reported to Parliament in accordance with the law.

ARTICLE 78

The executive structure of the Republic shall operate in a manner that ensures unity of command, administrative efficiency, institutional discipline, and effective coordination in the service of the State and the nation.

SECTION 6 – LEGISLATIVE

ARTICLE 79

The legislative authority of the Republic is vested in a bicameral Parliament, composed of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. Parliament enacts laws, oversees the executive branch, approves the national budget, ratifies treaties, and represents the interests of the people and the Regions.

ARTICLE 80

Parliamentary elections are held every five years. Citizens elect five hundred Members of the Chamber of Deputies by direct universal suffrage in single-member constituencies. Senators are elected by the Regional Assemblies, with each Region selecting ten members, for a total of seventy Senators.

ARTICLE 81

The Chamber of Deputies is the lower chamber of Parliament and the primary organ of popular representation. Each Representative is elected for a four-year term and represents a single parliamentary district. Representatives are required by law to meet with their constituents at least once every two months.

ARTICLE 82

The Speaker of the Chamber of Deputies is elected by its members and is the fourth-highest constitutional official of the Republic. The Speaker presides over legislative sessions, enforces parliamentary procedure, and manages the internal organization of the Chamber.

ARTICLE 83

The Chamber of Deputies has the power to initiate legislation and serves as the principal legislative chamber. All bills are debated, amended, and approved in accordance with parliamentary procedure and are subject to presidential promulgation and constitutional review.

ARTICLE 84

The Chamber of Deputies holds exclusive authority over fiscal legislation, including laws concerning taxation, public expenditure, and the national budget.

ARTICLE 85

The Chamber of Deputies has the sole authority to initiate impeachment proceedings against the President and other senior officials in cases of treason or grave violations of law. It also exercises political oversight over the Prime Minister and the Council of Ministers through the vote of confidence.

ARTICLE 86

The Senate is the upper chamber of Parliament and functions as the chamber of territorial representation. It represents the interests of the Regions and ensures their participation in national legislation.

ARTICLE 87

The Senate is presided over by the Speaker of the Senate, elected by its members. The Speaker of the Senate ensures procedural order and represents the chamber in institutional relations.

ARTICLE 88

Senators are elected by the Regional Assemblies, with each Region selecting ten Senators. This system guarantees equal regional representation within the legislative process.

ARTICLE 89

The Senate reviews, amends, and approves legislation passed by the Chamber of Deputies. It may return bills for reconsideration but may not block legislation indefinitely.

ARTICLE 90

The Senate conducts impeachment trials and votes on the removal of public officials following indictments approved by the Chamber of Deputies. A two-thirds majority of Senators is required for conviction.

ARTICLE 91

The Senate confirms presidential appointments, including judges of the Supreme Court and members of the Council of Ministers, in accordance with constitutional and legal procedures.

ARTICLE 92

International treaties negotiated by the executive shall require ratification by a two-thirds majority of the Senate. The Senate also authorizes declarations of war and major military operations.

ARTICLE 93

All legislation approved by Parliament shall require promulgation by the President and may be subject to constitutional review by the Supreme Court prior to entering into force.

ARTICLE 94

Parliament shall not appoint the Prime Minister or the Chief Justice. These powers are reserved to the President in accordance with the Constitution.

ARTICLE 95

An annual State of the Nation address shall be delivered by the Prime Minister before Parliament. The address shall present the condition of the Republic, government activity, and legislative priorities, followed by parliamentary debate.

ARTICLE 96

Parliament shall vote annually on the national budget prepared by the executive branch. Approval of the budget authorizes the financing of government expenditures and the execution of public policy for the fiscal year.

ARTICLE 97

Parliament exercises authority over matters of war and peace, taxation, treaty ratification, and approval of the national budget, in coordination with the Central Bank of Destenia and in accordance with constitutional procedures.

ARTICLE 98

When a Region acts in violation of the Constitution or threatens national unity, public order, or constitutional stability, the Senate may authorize the executive branch to assume temporary administrative authority over that Region for a maximum period of six months, under conditions defined by law.

ARTICLE 99

The Republic recognizes the referendum as an instrument of direct popular consultation. A referendum constitutes a non-binding expression of public opinion on matters of public interest, which Parliament or the competent legislative body may consider in the decision-making process.

ARTICLE 100

Referendums may be held at the national, regional, or local level. Their subject matter, procedures, validity requirements, and effects shall be regulated by law.

ARTICLE 101

A referendum may be initiated by a Member of Parliament or through a popular initiative supported by a minimum number of citizen signatures, as defined by law.

ARTICLE 102

The outcome of a referendum shall not be legally binding but shall be formally examined by the competent legislative authority, which may adopt, modify, or reject the proposals expressed by the electorate in accordance with constitutional procedures.

ARTICLE 103

The President may declare a State of Emergency in cases of serious threat to national security or public order. During a State of Emergency, the Executive Branch may temporarily assume expanded authority and may bypass Parliament for a maximum period of six months, under conditions defined by law.

ARTICLE 104

The President may declare Martial Law for a maximum period of six months, but only with the approval of the High Command of the Destenian Armed Forces and the Senate. Under Martial Law, military authority may support or replace civil institutions in areas affected by insurrection, invasion, or severe internal instability.

SECTION 7 – JUDICIARY

ARTICLE 105

The Judiciary of the Republic is entrusted with the administration of justice and the protection of the constitutional order. It is composed of the Supreme Court, Regional Courts, and Local Courts. The Judiciary functions independently from the executive and legislative branches and exercises its authority solely in accordance with the Constitution and the law.

ARTICLE 106

The Supreme Court is the highest judicial authority of the Republic of Destenia. It serves as the final court of appeal and the ultimate arbiter in matters of constitutional interpretation, legal disputes, and the protection of fundamental rights. It acts as the guardian of legality and constitutional justice.

ARTICLE 107

The Supreme Court exercises the power of judicial review and may declare laws, executive acts, or administrative measures unconstitutional. Decisions of the Supreme Court are final, binding on all institutions, and not subject to appeal.

ARTICLE 108

The Supreme Court is composed of several Justices as established by law, including a Chief Justice who presides over the Court. Justices are appointed by the President of the Republic and serve for a fixed term under conditions defined by law.

ARTICLE 109

The Supreme Court ensures due process, upholds the rule of law, and safeguards fundamental rights and liberties. It may hear cases initiated by the President, Parliament, the Council of Ministers, regional institutions, or individuals claiming a violation of constitutional rights.

ARTICLE 110

The Supreme Court resolves cases involving constitutional rights, conflicts between branches of government, disputes concerning the validity of laws, and legal questions referred by lower courts. It also reviews the constitutionality of international treaties and electoral legislation.

ARTICLE 111

The Chief Justice oversees the administration of the Supreme Court, assigns cases, and directs deliberations. The Chief Justice ensures that judicial proceedings are conducted impartially, efficiently, and in accordance with the law.

ARTICLE 112

Judges of the Supreme Court are independent and subject only to the Constitution and the law. They may be removed from office solely by a two-thirds vote of Parliament for serious misconduct, incapacity, or grave violation of judicial duties, in accordance with the law.

ARTICLE 113

Decisions of the Supreme Court constitute binding legal precedent for all courts and form an integral part of national jurisprudence. Through its rulings, the Court ensures legal uniformity and constitutional stability.

ARTICLE 114

Regional Courts function as courts of general district within the national judicial system. They operate within the territory of the Regions and apply national and regional law in conformity with the Constitution.

ARTICLE 115

Regional Courts resolve civil, criminal, administrative, and family law matters and serve as appellate courts where provided by law, ensuring coherence and consistency in the administration of justice.

ARTICLE 116

Judges of the Regional Courts are appointed according to procedures established by each Region, in conformity with constitutional standards. All judges are bound to apply national law and Supreme Court precedent regardless of the method of appointment.

ARTICLE 117

Local Courts constitute the foundational level of the judicial system. They are established throughout the Provinces and exercise jurisdiction in accordance with national and regional law.

ARTICLE 118

Local Courts adjudicate minor criminal offenses, misdemeanors, small civil claims, family disputes, landlord-tenant matters, and other local legal issues as defined by law. Local Courts are independent in their judicial function and are not hierarchically subordinate to Regional Courts or the Supreme Court.

ARTICLE 119

Local Courts apply national and regional law directly. Their decisions may be reviewed or appealed only in accordance with procedures established by law.

ARTICLE 120

The General Prosecutor of the Republic heads the national prosecution service and is responsible for directing criminal prosecutions, ensuring uniform application of criminal law, and defending the legal interests of the State. The General Prosecutor operates independently and in accordance with the law.

ARTICLE 121

The General Inspector of the Republic oversees the integrity, legality, and accountability of public administration and judicial institutions. The General Inspector conducts inspections, audits, and investigations into misconduct, corruption, and abuse of authority, in accordance with the law.

ARTICLE 122

The General Prosecutor and the General Inspector shall be appointed by the President of the Republic under conditions established by law and shall exercise their functions independently, without interference from political authorities.

ARTICLE 123

All persons have the right to access the courts for the protection of their rights and freedoms. The law guarantees a fair and public hearing before an independent and impartial tribunal, in accordance with the principles of equality, justice, and due process.

SECTION 8 – AMENDMENTS

ARTICLE 124

Parliament shall have the authority to propose and adopt amendments to this Constitution. Any proposed amendment shall require approval by a two-thirds majority of both the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate.

ARTICLE 125

Once approved in accordance with this Constitution, an amendment shall enter into force and become an integral part of the Constitution, possessing the same legal authority as all other constitutional provisions. Where applicable, the Regions shall amend their Regional Charters to ensure full conformity with the amended Constitution.

ARTICLE 126

No constitutional amendment shall be permitted that abolishes the democratic order of the Republic, undermines its sovereignty, or nullifies the fundamental rights and freedoms of citizens, including the rights to life, equality before the law, and due process. These principles shall remain permanently protected under the Constitution.
