

CHARTER OF THE WORLD UNION

We the Peoples of the World, mindful that humanity forms one community of destiny, determined to save present and future generations from war and mass suffering, to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights and the dignity and worth of the human person, and to uphold the sovereign equality of States; resolved to establish conditions under which justice, accountability, and respect for obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law may be maintained; committed to multilateral cooperation, peaceful settlement of disputes, sustainable development, and the protection of the natural world; and resolved to unite our strength to maintain international peace and security and to employ international machinery for the economic, social, scientific, and cultural advancement of all peoples; have agreed to establish the World Union, headquartered in Distinia, Destenia, and to this end adopt the present Charter.

Chapter I — Purposes and Principles

Article 1

The World Union is established as the principal organization of sovereign States for the maintenance of international peace and security. It shall act as a permanent forum for diplomacy and as a framework for collective measures under this Charter.

Article 2

The purposes of the World Union include preventing and removing threats to peace, suppressing acts of aggression, and promoting the peaceful settlement of disputes. In pursuing these purposes, the World Union shall observe the principles of legality, proportionality, and collective legitimacy.

Article 3

The World Union shall promote friendly relations among nations based on respect for the sovereign equality of States and the self-determination of peoples. It shall encourage cooperation that strengthens stability, reduces hostility, and builds long-term trust among nations.

Article 4

The World Union shall promote and coordinate international cooperation in economic, social, scientific, cultural, and humanitarian fields. It shall support the progressive realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without discrimination.

Article 5

All Members shall fulfill in good faith the obligations assumed under this Charter. Members shall take such domestic measures as may be necessary to enable compliance with duties that arise from decisions adopted under this Charter.

Article 6

Members shall settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace, security, and justice are not endangered. Peaceful means include negotiation, inquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, and other peaceful procedures of their choice.

Article 7

Members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State. The use of force is permissible only in self-defense consistent with international law or when authorized under this Charter.

Article 8

The World Union is founded on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members. No Member shall claim special rights within the organs of the World Union by reason of power, wealth, or status.

Article 9

The World Union and its officials shall respect the domestic jurisdiction of States and shall not seek to determine their internal political systems. This principle does not prejudice enforcement measures expressly provided by this Charter to address threats to peace or grave international crimes.

Article 10

The official motto of the World Union is “One World, One Humanity.” The anthem of the World Union is the “Hymn of the World Union,” and the emblems of the World Union may be displayed by its organs in accordance with regulations adopted by the General Assembly.

Chapter II — Membership

Article 11

Membership in the World Union is open to all sovereign States that possess a defined territory, a permanent population, and an effective government capable of entering into international relations. No political, ideological, or economic prerequisites shall be imposed as conditions of membership.

Article 12

Any applicant State shall submit a written application to the Secretariat, which shall circulate it promptly to all Members. The Secretariat may request clarifying information necessary to confirm the attributes of statehood.

Article 13

Admission to membership shall be decided by the General Assembly by a majority of Members present and voting. Upon admission, all Members are legally bound to recognize the sovereignty of the admitted State.

Article 14

Every Member has equal rights of participation, including the right to attend, speak, propose items, and vote in the General Assembly. Members shall be eligible for election to offices and organs in accordance with this Charter and applicable rules.

Article 15

Membership entails obligations of cooperation, including compliance with binding decisions adopted under this Charter, participation in collective measures as required, and contribution to the budget in accordance with Article 55.

Article 16

A Member may request technical assistance from the World Union to support compliance with Charter obligations, including capacity-building in justice cooperation, humanitarian coordination, and climate reporting. Assistance shall not impair the sovereignty of the requesting State.

Article 17

A Member that persistently violates the principles of this Charter may have certain rights and privileges suspended by decision of the General Assembly. Suspension shall be proportionate, time-limited, and subject to review.

Article 18

Expulsion from the World Union may occur only after a judgment of the International Tribunal for Justice finding repeated and egregious violations of international law or of this Charter. Following such judgment, expulsion shall require approval by the General Assembly by a two-thirds majority.

Article 19

A Member may withdraw from the World Union by written notification to the Depositary. Withdrawal shall take effect one year after receipt of notification, without prejudice to outstanding financial obligations and duties arising from acts committed while a Member.

Article 20

The General Assembly shall adopt rules regarding credentials, representation, and the verification of authority of delegations. Disputes concerning representation may be referred for advisory opinion to the International Tribunal for Justice.

Chapter III — Organs and Affiliated Organizations

Article 21

The principal organs of the World Union are the General Assembly, the Secretariat, the International Tribunal for Justice, and the World Commission. These organs shall cooperate to ensure coherent governance of the World Union System.

Article 22

The World Commission is established as a coordinating organ for technical policy frameworks and long-term global planning. It shall support the General Assembly and the Secretariat by issuing analyses, standards proposals, and implementation reviews.

Article 23

The General Assembly may establish subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions, including committees, councils, panels, and peacekeeping coordination bodies. Such organs shall be accountable to the Assembly.

Article 24

The World Union System includes affiliated organizations established under the authority of this Charter or by agreement with the World Union. These organizations may include bodies in finance, trade, health, climate, migration, humanitarian relief, and other fields.

Article 25

Affiliated organizations shall operate under their own statutes, consistent with this Charter. Their statutes shall specify mandates, governance structures, reporting duties, and oversight relations with the World Union.

Article 26

The Secretariat shall maintain an official register of affiliated organizations and shall publish an annual coordination report. Overlap of mandates shall be avoided through inter-agency coordination procedures.

Article 27

Affiliated organizations shall be guided by the purposes and principles of the World Union and shall respect the sovereignty of Member States. Operational activities within a State shall be conducted with the consent of that State, except where enforcement measures are authorized under this Charter.

Article 28

The World Union may conclude agreements with regional organizations and other international entities to coordinate activities. Such agreements shall not derogate from the obligations of Members under this Charter.

Article 29

The organs of the World Union may request information and reports from affiliated organizations necessary for the performance of their functions. Affiliated organizations shall respond in good faith and in accordance with their statutes.

Article 30

The World Union shall promote transparency and integrity within all organs and affiliated organizations. Anti-corruption, audit, and ethics systems shall be established and maintained under standards adopted by the General Assembly.

Article 31

The headquarters of the World Union shall be located in Distinia, Destenia, and shall host the principal organs except the International Tribunal for Justice. Headquarters arrangements shall be governed by a headquarters agreement with the host State.

Article 32

The International Tribunal for Justice shall be seated in Dior, Laocitia, in order to safeguard its independence and neutrality. The seat agreement shall guarantee the Tribunal's security, autonomy, and operational continuity.

Chapter IV — The General Assembly

Article 33

The General Assembly is the principal deliberative, policymaking, and representative organ of the World Union. It may consider any matter within the scope of this Charter and may adopt decisions, directives, or resolutions as provided herein.

Article 34

The General Assembly shall consist of all Members of the World Union, each having one vote. No Member may exercise more than one vote, and no system of veto shall exist.

Article 35

The General Assembly shall meet in regular session once each year at the headquarters of the World Union, unless it decides otherwise. Special sessions may be convened upon the request of the Secretary-General or a specified number of Members.

Article 36

The Assembly shall elect a Chairman and Deputy Chairmen under a rotating regional principle, according to rules adopted by the Assembly. The Chairman shall preside impartially and ensure orderly conduct of business.

Article 37

The Assembly shall establish standing committees, including committees for international security, economic and financial affairs, humanitarian and cultural affairs, special political and security coordination, administrative and budgetary affairs, and legal and credentials matters.

Article 38

The Assembly may create ad hoc committees or investigative panels to address particular crises, thematic issues, or alleged violations of the Charter. Such bodies shall operate under terms of reference approved by the Assembly.

Article 39

The Assembly may adopt non-binding resolutions expressing the collective view of the Members on global matters. Resolutions shall guide international norms and coordinate voluntary action, unless expressly designated as binding under this Charter.

Article 40

The Assembly may adopt decisions that are binding upon Members in the areas expressly defined by this Charter, including budgetary obligations, peacekeeping mandates, sanctions regimes, and procedural obligations for cooperation with the Tribunal.

Article 41

The Assembly may adopt directives requiring Members to implement certain measures domestically within defined timeframes. Directives shall specify objectives, minimum standards, and reporting requirements, leaving choice of form and methods to national authorities.

Article 42

Matters of international peace and security, admission of new Members, expulsion, and the adoption of the regular budget shall require a two-thirds majority of Members present and voting. Other matters shall require a simple majority unless the Assembly decides otherwise by rule.

Article 43

The Assembly shall approve the establishment, mandate, and rules of engagement of peacekeeping operations authorized under this Charter. It may also establish mission review mechanisms and termination conditions.

Article 44

The Assembly may authorize collective measures, including diplomatic and economic measures and, as a last resort, coalition military measures, in accordance with Chapter VIII. Such authorization shall specify the objectives, scope, and limitations of action.

Article 45

The Assembly shall consider and approve the annual budget submitted by the Secretariat. It shall also oversee financial integrity through audits, procurement standards, and independent oversight mechanisms.

Article 46

The Assembly shall elect the Secretary-General and may elect or confirm other senior officials of the World Union as specified in this Charter or in statutes of affiliated organizations. Elections shall be conducted by secret ballot unless the Assembly decides otherwise.

Article 47

The Assembly shall receive annual and special reports from the Secretary-General on the work of the World Union. It may request additional reports on specific issues, including compliance with mandates, sanctions, and humanitarian operations.

Article 48

The Assembly may request advisory opinions of the International Tribunal for Justice on legal questions arising within the scope of the Charter. Requests shall be adopted by resolution specifying the precise question.

Article 49

The Assembly shall establish procedures for public transparency, including publication of agendas, adopted texts, and summarized records. Sensitive security information may be handled under confidential procedures approved by the Assembly.

Article 50

The Assembly shall adopt rules on observer participation, consultations with civil society, and engagement with experts. Such participation shall not prejudice the sovereign equality of Members.

Article 51

The Assembly may establish standards for the protection of human rights under the Universal Rights Doctrine and may mandate monitoring and reporting mechanisms. Such mechanisms shall be impartial, evidence-based, and respectful of due process.

Article 52

The Assembly may establish global standards and coordinating frameworks in areas such as climate action, public health, humanitarian relief, financial integrity, and transnational infrastructure. Implementation shall occur through the Secretariat and affiliated organizations.

Article 53

The Assembly may adopt measures to combat transnational crime, terrorism, and corruption, including through cooperation with the International Police Agency and the Global Anti-Corruption Taskforce. Members shall cooperate in good faith with lawful requests issued under these frameworks.

Article 54

The Assembly may establish sanctions committees and compliance panels to oversee the application of economic and diplomatic measures. Such bodies shall ensure transparency, humanitarian safeguards, and periodic review.

Article 55

The Assembly shall determine the scale of assessed contributions to the budget, taking into account national capacity including GDP and other equitable factors. It may establish a ceiling rate to prevent financial dominance by any single Member.

Article 56

The Assembly shall approve the financial regulations of the World Union, including rules on accounting, auditing, procurement, and anti-fraud measures. An independent external auditor shall be appointed under terms approved by the Assembly.

Article 57

The Assembly may convene emergency debates and adopt urgent measures when a crisis threatens international peace, mass human suffering, or global stability. Emergency procedures shall preserve due process and proportionality.

Article 58

The Assembly shall adopt and may amend its rules of procedure, including rules on agenda-setting, voting, quorum, and the conduct of debates. The Assembly shall ensure that procedures remain fair and workable for all Members.

Chapter V — The International Tribunal for Justice

Article 59

The International Tribunal for Justice (ITJ) is the principal judicial organ of the World Union and the highest court of the international system within the World Union framework. It shall act independently and impartially in accordance with this Charter and its Statute.

Article 60

The Tribunal shall have jurisdiction to decide legal disputes between States, including disputes concerning treaties, borders, responsibility for internationally wrongful acts, and other matters of international law.

Article 61

The Tribunal shall exercise jurisdiction over individuals for crimes under international law, including genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes, and other grave offenses defined by the Tribunal's Statute. The exercise of individual criminal jurisdiction shall respect due process and fair trial guarantees.

Article 62

All Members are ipso facto parties to the Tribunal's jurisdiction in respect of inter-State disputes and shall accept the binding character of its judgments. Non-members may accept jurisdiction by special agreement for particular cases.

Article 63

The Tribunal may render advisory opinions on legal questions submitted by the General Assembly or, where authorized, by other organs. Advisory opinions shall have authoritative interpretive weight within the World Union System.

Article 64

Judgments of the Tribunal shall be final and binding upon the parties to the case. There shall be no appeal, but revision may be requested under the strict conditions established in the Tribunal's Statute.

Article 65

The Tribunal shall consist of fifteen judges of high moral character, impartiality, and recognized competence in international law. No two judges may be nationals of the same Member State.

Article 66

Judges shall be elected by the General Assembly for non-renewable nine-year terms, with one third of the seats renewed every three years. The election procedure shall aim to ensure geographic and legal-system diversity.

Article 67

Judges shall not engage in political activity and shall not seek or accept instructions from any government. They shall enjoy functional independence and necessary privileges and immunities.

Article 68

The Tribunal shall elect its President and Vice-President and shall adopt its rules of procedure. It may sit in chambers for particular categories of cases where appropriate.

Article 69

The Tribunal may indicate provisional measures to preserve rights or to prevent irreparable harm pending the final decision. Members shall comply promptly with such measures.

Article 70

The Tribunal may issue international arrest warrants and requests for cooperation in criminal matters to all Members. Members shall execute such requests in accordance with domestic law and applicable international obligations.

Article 71

The Tribunal shall cooperate with the Secretariat, the International Human Rights Commission, and the Global Anti-Corruption Taskforce in accordance with agreed protocols. Cooperation shall preserve judicial independence and confidentiality where required.

Article 72

Members undertake to comply with decisions and orders of the Tribunal and to provide assistance for their implementation. Failure to comply may be referred to the General Assembly for measures under Chapter VIII.

Article 73

The Tribunal shall have a Registry and administrative services sufficient to support its functions. The Registry shall be headed by a Registrar appointed in accordance with the Tribunal's Statute.

Article 74

The Tribunal may provide guidance on the interpretation of this Charter when disputes arise concerning the competence of organs or the legality of measures. Such interpretation shall contribute to the coherence of the international order.

Article 75

The seat and security of the Tribunal shall be guaranteed by the host State in a manner that safeguards independence and continuity. Interference, intimidation, or obstruction of Tribunal personnel or proceedings shall be treated as a serious breach of this Charter.

Article 76

The Tribunal's Statute forms an integral part of this Charter. Where the Statute provides further detail, it shall be applied consistently with the principles and purposes of the Charter.

Chapter VI — The Secretariat

Article 77

The Secretariat is the executive and administrative organ of the World Union and shall act under the authority of the Secretary-General. It shall implement decisions of the General Assembly and coordinate the work of the World Union System.

Article 78

The Secretary-General is the chief administrative officer and chief diplomat of the World Union. The Secretary-General shall represent the organization externally and may offer good offices, mediation, and preventive diplomacy.

Article 79

The Secretary-General shall be elected by the General Assembly for a term determined by the Assembly, guided by norms of one or two five-year terms. The election shall be based on competence, integrity, neutrality, and international experience.

Article 80

A Deputy Secretary-General may be appointed under procedures established by the Assembly to support daily operations and interdepartmental coordination. Additional Under-Secretaries may be appointed for major portfolios in accordance with staff regulations.

Article 81

The Secretariat shall maintain twelve specialized departments covering, inter alia, international security, administration, public relations, energy and environment, health and sciences, infrastructure, international justice liaison, social and cultural affairs, and regional affairs. The Assembly may adjust departmental structure by decision.

Article 82

The Department of International Security shall support peacekeeping planning, early warning, arms-control initiatives, and operational coordination of authorized coalitions. It shall maintain a crisis monitoring capability and incident reporting standards.

Article 83

The Department of Administration shall manage personnel, procurement, finance, records, and institutional governance. It shall enforce internal control frameworks and cooperate with oversight bodies to prevent fraud and abuse.

Article 84

The Department of Energy and Environment shall coordinate climate policy, emission reporting, energy cooperation, and environmental protection measures in collaboration with the World Climate Agency and the International Energy Agency. It shall support Member States through technical assistance where requested.

Article 85

The Department of Health and Sciences shall coordinate global health initiatives, pandemic preparedness, and scientific collaboration with the Global Health Organization and other bodies. It shall support surveillance, response, and equitable access to essential medical resources.

Article 86

The Department of Infrastructure shall coordinate transnational connectivity projects, resilience planning, and standards for critical infrastructure. It shall cooperate with the International Transport and Logistics Organization and other relevant agencies.

Article 87

The Department of International Justice shall liaise with the International Tribunal for Justice and support rule-of-law programming, legal capacity-building, and implementation assistance for judicial cooperation. It shall not interfere with judicial independence.

Article 88

The Department of Social and Cultural Affairs shall coordinate education, cultural exchange, migration cooperation, and protection of vulnerable populations in partnership with relevant agencies. It shall support intercultural dialogue consistent with the Charter's principles.

Article 89

The Department of Regional Affairs shall coordinate relations with regional organizations and facilitate tailored cooperation with Member States. It shall support regional diplomacy, early warning, and the alignment of regional initiatives with World Union objectives.

Article 90

The Secretariat shall prepare the annual budget and submit it to the General Assembly together with a program plan, performance indicators, and audited financial statements. It shall also publish periodic implementation reports on mandates and directives.

Article 91

Staff of the Secretariat shall act exclusively in the interest of the World Union and shall not seek or receive instructions from any government. Members undertake to respect the international character of the Secretariat and to refrain from attempting to influence its officials.

Article 92

The World Union shall establish ethics rules, whistleblower protections, and disciplinary procedures applicable to officials and staff. Violations of integrity obligations shall be investigated promptly and sanctioned appropriately.

Article 93

The Secretary-General may bring to the attention of the General Assembly any matter that in the Secretary-General's opinion may threaten international peace and security or cause mass humanitarian harm. This prerogative shall be exercised with impartiality and based on credible information.

Article 94

The Secretariat and its personnel shall enjoy such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the independent exercise of their functions. The scope of privileges and immunities shall be set out in a convention approved by the General Assembly.

Chapter VII — Settlement of Disputes

Article 95

Members shall seek to resolve disputes promptly by peaceful means and in good faith. Members shall avoid public actions that unnecessarily escalate tensions while settlement procedures are ongoing.

Article 96

Members may request the good offices of the Secretary-General, including facilitation of dialogue, shuttle diplomacy, and the establishment of contact groups. The Secretariat may propose confidence-building measures when appropriate.

Article 97

The General Assembly may recommend appropriate procedures or methods of adjustment for any dispute that might endanger peace. Recommendations may include fact-finding missions, mediation frameworks, or referral to arbitration or judicial settlement.

Article 98

A Member may refer a legal dispute to the International Tribunal for Justice in accordance with the Tribunal's Statute. Submission to the Tribunal shall include a clear statement of claims, facts, and requested remedies.

Article 99

Where urgent risks exist, the General Assembly may establish an inquiry commission to determine relevant facts. Inquiry commissions shall operate impartially and report publicly, subject to necessary confidentiality protections.

Article 100

Members shall cooperate with mediation and conciliation processes established under this Charter, including by providing relevant information and facilitating access where necessary. Confidentiality of mediation shall be respected unless waived by the parties.

Article 101

Arbitration may be used as a binding procedure when the parties consent, including under rules adopted by the General Assembly. Arbitration awards shall be respected and may be enforced through procedures provided by this Charter.

Article 102

In disputes involving allegations of grave international crimes, the matter may be referred to the Tribunal for appropriate proceedings. The protection of victims, witnesses, and due process rights shall be ensured.

Article 103

Where disputes relate to treaty interpretation within the World Union System, organs and agencies may request advisory guidance from the Tribunal. Such guidance shall promote coherence and predictability in international obligations.

Article 104

Failure to engage in peaceful settlement in good faith may be considered by the General Assembly when determining appropriate measures under this Charter. Measures shall remain proportionate and aimed at restoring lawful cooperation.

Chapter VIII — Action with respect to Threats to the Peace, Breaches of the Peace, and Acts of Aggression

Article 105

The General Assembly shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression, on the basis of facts and applicable international law. It may call upon the parties to comply with provisional measures to prevent escalation.

Article 106

The Assembly may decide upon measures to maintain or restore international peace and security. Measures may include diplomatic initiatives, public condemnation, fact-finding, monitoring, and the creation of special envoys or missions.

Article 107

The Assembly may impose economic and diplomatic measures, including targeted sanctions, restrictions on arms transfers, travel bans, asset freezes, and limitations on specific trade or financial flows. Sanctions shall include humanitarian exemptions and periodic review.

Article 108

The Assembly may authorize peacekeeping operations for the purpose of monitoring ceasefires, protecting civilians, supporting humanitarian access, and assisting political settlements. Peacekeeping mandates shall include clear rules of engagement and accountability standards.

Article 109

Where non-military measures would be inadequate and a serious threat persists, the Assembly may authorize collective military action by a coalition of willing Members. Such authorization shall specify objectives, scope, duration, and reporting requirements.

Article 110

Collective action authorized under this Chapter shall comply with international humanitarian law and international human rights law. The protection of civilians and the principle of necessity and proportionality shall guide all operations.

Article 111

Members agree to make available to the World Union, on request and in accordance with their capabilities, assistance for authorized operations including personnel, logistics, intelligence-sharing, medical support, and transit facilities. No Member is required to contribute forces absent its consent, unless otherwise provided by treaty.

Article 112

The Secretariat shall establish an operational coordination mechanism for authorized coalitions and peacekeeping, including command-and-control interfaces, common reporting standards, and incident accountability procedures. Operational details shall respect national command prerogatives.

Article 113

The International Tribunal for Justice may review the legality of enforcement measures when requested by the General Assembly or when a dispute arises concerning Charter compliance. Such review shall not impede urgent protective action where delay would cause grave harm.

Article 114

The Assembly may authorize protective measures to prevent mass atrocities, including genocide and crimes against humanity, where credible evidence indicates an imminent or ongoing risk. Such measures shall prioritize prevention, civilian protection, and rapid de-escalation.

Article 115

The Assembly may establish post-conflict stabilization frameworks, including ceasefire monitoring, disarmament support, and reconstruction coordination, in cooperation with relevant agencies. Member consent and local ownership shall be respected to the maximum extent consistent with peace and security.

Article 116

No veto power shall exist within the World Union. Decisions under this Chapter shall be adopted in accordance with the voting rules established by this Charter and the Assembly's procedure.

Chapter IX — Regional Organizations

Article 117

The World Union recognizes the role of regional organizations in promoting peace, cooperation, and development. Regional arrangements may address matters of local dispute settlement and coordinated action consistent with this Charter.

Article 118

Regional organizations shall operate in a manner consistent with the purposes and principles of the World Union. Members shall ensure that commitments undertaken within regional arrangements do not conflict with obligations under this Charter.

Article 119

The Secretariat shall maintain liaison mechanisms with regional organizations, including information-sharing, coordination on crisis prevention, and joint planning where appropriate. Liaison shall respect the autonomy of regional bodies.

Article 120

Regional peace operations may be undertaken with the authorization or acknowledgment of the General Assembly when such operations have cross-regional implications or require World Union support. Coordination shall ensure unified objectives and compliance with international law.

Article 121

The World Union may conclude cooperation agreements with regional organizations to coordinate humanitarian operations, migration management, public health action, and climate adaptation. Such agreements shall be approved under procedures established by the General Assembly.

Article 122

Regional organizations may submit reports and recommendations to the General Assembly on matters affecting regional peace and stability. The Assembly may take such reports into account when adopting measures under this Charter.

Chapter X — Cooperation

Article 123

Members shall cooperate with the World Union in achieving international cooperation in economic, social, cultural, scientific, and humanitarian fields. Cooperation shall be based on mutual respect, consent, and shared responsibility.

Article 124

Members shall cooperate to promote universal respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, including through support for the International Human Rights Commission. Cooperation may include reporting, technical assistance, and remedial action plans.

Article 125

Members shall cooperate to address global health threats, including pandemics and cross-border disease outbreaks, through the Global Health Organization and relevant Secretariat departments. Members shall support timely information-sharing and coordinated response measures.

Article 126

Members shall cooperate to combat climate change and environmental degradation through the World Climate Agency and related bodies. Members shall provide reliable data, participate in agreed targets, and support adaptation and resilience measures.

Article 127

Members shall cooperate to promote a stable international economic order, including through the Global Reserve Fund and the World Trade Network. Cooperation may include crisis assistance frameworks, fair trade standards, and anti-corruption safeguards for development finance.

Article 128

Members shall cooperate in humanitarian assistance and the protection of displaced persons through the World Refugee and Migration Organization and the International Humanitarian Relief Fund. Humanitarian action shall be guided by humanity, neutrality, impartiality, and operational independence.

Article 129

Members shall cooperate in combating transnational crime, corruption, and terrorism, including through the International Police Agency and the Global Anti-Corruption Taskforce. Cooperation shall include lawful information-sharing, mutual legal assistance, and capacity-building.

Article 130

The General Assembly may adopt global cooperation frameworks and indicators to measure progress in development, stability, and human welfare. The Secretariat shall publish periodic reports and may recommend adjustments to programs and priorities.

Chapter XI — Transitional Security Arrangements

Article 131

Pending the full operational maturity of World Union mechanisms, Members agree to maintain transitional arrangements to protect peace and prevent escalation. Such arrangements may include interim coordination among willing Members under Secretariat facilitation.

Article 132

Existing alliances and security understandings shall be interpreted and applied in a manner consistent with the purposes and principles of this Charter. Members shall avoid actions that would undermine collective legitimacy or provoke unnecessary instability.

Article 133

The General Assembly may establish transitional coordination groups for urgent crises, including temporary command liaison structures and rapid-deployment planning for peacekeeping. Transitional structures shall be reviewed and either integrated into permanent mechanisms or dissolved.

Article 134

Transitional arrangements shall not create permanent privileges for any Member and shall be subject to transparency and oversight. Reports on transitional security actions shall be submitted to the General Assembly within defined timelines.

Chapter XII — Miscellaneous Provisions

Article 135

The official languages of the World Union are Destenian, Tayanusan, Valmirican, and Fesian. The Secretariat shall ensure interpretation and translation for official meetings and shall adopt rules for authentic texts and language equivalence.

Article 136

The World Union shall adopt symbols, seals, and visual standards for official documents and premises. The General Assembly shall regulate the use of emblems and may authorize watermarks, seals, and authentication procedures for Charter instruments and official acts.

Chapter XIII — Amendments

Article 137

Any Member may propose amendments to this Charter by submitting the proposed text to the Secretary-General for circulation. The General Assembly shall consider proposed amendments in accordance with its rules of procedure.

Article 138

Amendments shall be adopted by a two-thirds majority of the General Assembly and shall enter into force upon ratification by two-thirds of the Members, including all Members serving as principal financial contributors above a threshold established by the Assembly.

Chapter XIV — Ratification and Signature

Article 139

This Charter shall be subject to ratification by the signatory States in accordance with their respective constitutional processes. Instruments of ratification shall be deposited with the Depositary designated by the General Assembly.

Article 140

The present Charter shall enter into force on 1 October 2020, upon deposit of instruments of ratification by a majority of the founding signatories. It shall remain binding upon all Members, and certified copies shall be transmitted to each Member in the official languages.

Adopted at Distinia, Destenia, on 1 October 2020.
